An aerial photograph showing a residential development under construction. The site is situated on a hillside, bordered by a dense forest of green trees. A multi-lane highway runs along the right side of the property. In the foreground, several multi-story apartment buildings with dark grey roofs and light-colored facades are under construction. A large, irregularly shaped parking lot with dark asphalt is also visible. To the left of the construction site, there is a large area of cleared, reddish-brown earth, indicating recent excavation or grading work. In the background, a residential street with several houses is visible, separated from the construction site by a grassy area. The overall scene depicts a new housing project in a wooded, suburban setting.
